

How much does multimode outdoor fiber optic cable cost

AI Overview

Outdoor multimode fiber optic cables typically range from $0.25 to $1.50 per foot for the cable alone, with installation costs adding $2.00–$6.00 per foot depending on complexity.

Price Overview

OM1 (62.5/125 μm): Ideal for short-distance networking, legacy systems, and less demanding environments. Prices start around $0.25–$0.50 per foot for standard outdoor-rated cables with basic jackets and duplex configurations.

OM3 (50/125 μm): High-performance multimode fiber suitable for 10-Gigabit Ethernet. Typical outdoor cable prices range from $0.50–$0.75 per foot, depending on strand count and jacket type.

OM4 (50/125 μm): Optimized for modern enterprise networks and high-bandwidth applications. Prices generally range from $0.60–$1.00 per foot for outdoor-rated cables, with armored or gel-filled options costing more.

OM5 (50/125 μm): Supports wavelength division multiplexing (WDM) for advanced multimode systems. Outdoor OM5 cables are priced around $0.80–$1.50 per foot, depending on strand count and protective features.

Strand Counts and Configurations

Common strand counts include 2, 6, 12, 24, and 48 fibers. Higher strand counts increase the per-foot cost due to additional material and complexity. Cables are available in duplex, simplex, and multifiber configurations, with pre-terminated options (LC, SC, FC, ST connectors) adding to the cost.

Jacket and Protection Options

Outdoor-rated jackets: UV-resistant, water-resistant, and LSZH (Low Smoke Zero Halogen) options are available.

Armored or interlocking armor: Provides extra protection for direct burial or harsh environments, increasing the price by $0.20–$0.50 per foot.

Gel-filled or OSP (Outside Plant) cables: Designed for long-distance outdoor runs, often priced higher due to enhanced durability.

Installation Considerations

Installation costs can significantly exceed the cable price, especially...
