

Italian Micro-Module Data Center Brand

AI Overview

Italy hosts several data center operators and associations, with companies like Naquadria, Elmec Informatica, and Deda Cloud leading in modular and high-efficiency solutions. Italian Data Center Companies Several Italian companies are prominent in the data center sector: Naquadria: Offers Cloud IaaS, colocation, and backup services with a focus on secure and scalable infrastructure for over 3,000 clients. Elmec Informatica: Operates a certified Tier IV data center that is fully green, providing modular and sustainable solutions for businesses undergoing digital transformation. Deda Cloud: Specializes in integrated cloud services with multicloud infrastructure and robust security, supporting flexible and efficient data center operations. System Data Center: Provides innovative IT solutions, including AI-driven customer care and modular support for data center operations. Micro-Module Data Center Solutions Micro-module data centers are compact, prefabricated units designed for rapid deployment and high-density computing. Key features include: Rapid deployment: Factory prefabrication and plug-and-play installation can reduce construction cycles by over 50%. Modular design: Unified interface standards and modular racks allow scalable expansion as needed. Energy efficiency: Closed cold/hot aisle systems and high-density racks improve cooling efficiency, achieving PUE as low as 1.3. Intelligent management: Integrated monitoring systems provide real-time environmental data, alarm management, and energy efficiency reporting. Flexible power: Single cabinets can support 1KW-16KW, accommodating high-density computing requirements. Industry Association The Italian Datacenter Association (IDA) represents data center builders and operators in Italy, promoting the development of modular and micro data center solutions nationally. Membership in IDA can help identify Italian companies actively developing micro-module infrastructure. Summary While Italy does not have a single globally recognized micro-module data center brand, companies li...
