

Protective Rubber at Cable Tray Bends

Overview

Cable tray rubber is a critical protective component used in electrical installations to insulate and safeguard cables laid across metal cable trays. Solid and reliable cable protection products prevent cables from being damaged due to mechanical, thermal or chemical stress. High mechanical loads can arise, especially at enclosure openings on machines. Cable grommets help to minimise these risks and to protect the cabling. These covers enhance system reliability, extend cable lifespan, and improve workplace safety. Choosing the right type. Durable rubber construction for long-lasting protection Made from high-quality rubber material, this sealing strip offers excellent durability and resistance to wear, ensuring reliable performance in various environments and applications. For subminiature connectors (e. series MMCX, SSMB, SSMC) we recommend the use of heat shrinkable.
